

INTERSTATE RESTORATION, CATASTROPHE SERVICES INTERNATIONAL AND COLORADO FIRE AND FLOOD TO MERGE

Combined Company to Become the Premier Disaster Recovery and Construction Company

DENVER, Colorado – February 2007 – Interstate Restoration, Catastrophe Services International and Colorado Fire and Flood today announced a definitive agreement to merge in a cash and stock transaction. Terms were not disclosed.

Combining the three companies will provide a national platform to deliver a comprehensive suite of products and services in the disaster recovery and construction industry. Together, the three companies will meet a wider set of customer needs and have a significantly greater opportunity to grow into new markets.

"Opportunities to combine with companies with the rich history and traditions of Catastrophe Services International and Colorado Fire and Flood rarely ever happen – we are very excited about the potential of the new organization," said Stacy Mazur, President and Chief Executive Officer of the combined entity. "By combining the strengths of each company, we intend to become the gold standard in the industry, delivering unparalleled quality and customer service to those companies dealing with unfortunate events."

In addition to Mazur, the Company will be led by Chris Sinclair, who will become chief operating officer, and Jeff Johnson, former founder and chief executive officer of Belfor USA , the largest company in the industry, who will join the Company as Chairman of the Board.

"I have known Stacy and Chris, along with other key members of the team, for a number of years, and am confident that the new company will deliver remarkable service and, in turn, financial results," said Johnson. "We will be innovative and deliver results oriented solutions."

Questions regarding the transaction and new entity should be directed to _____ at 303/225-0060.